Milton alcohol sales headed to November vote

Petition draws enough signatures to trigger referendum

BY CINDY WARRICK
PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

A petition to have alcohol sales listed on the November ballot in Milton has apparently received enough signatures to force that issue to a vote.

Milton Commissioner Lee Carson presented the petition at the Commission's monthly meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 9. The petition was circulated recently on the following question: "Are you in favor of the sale of alcoholic beverages in the city of Milton, Kentucky?"

Carson said the petition was not to take a stand on the issue, but to gather enough signatures to include it on the November ballot. He said of that of the signatures gathered, 92 were not able to be counted but 72 signatures were accepted. Based on the number of votes cast in Milton's last election, 57 vote were needed to get the issue on the ballot.

According to Carson, approximately 100 more people indicated a desire to sign the petition, but the time for signatures had closed and they were advised "to cast their vote in November."

Although it in no way will impact the outcome of the referendum, the Commissioners took a vote on their stand on the alcohol sales issue but did not announce the results since the only vote that will count is the one voters can participate in this November.

The Commission also heard a presentation by Milton Fire Department Chief Jason Long on a potential special taxing district for Milton Fire Department.

The request for the study came from Trimble County Fiscal Court where magistrates were tasked with working with committees throughout the county. Magistrate J.D. Jones was tasked with this committee. Initial meetings have produced suggestions for consideration of a Fire Taxing District.

Currently there are three options being discussed including:

- Option 1 would require the fire department to be reorganized into a KRS Chapter 75 Fire Protection District administered by a board of trustees consisting of seven people — three appointees by the County Judge Executive, two firefighters voted by their membership and two elected by property owners within the district.

Breathing new life into Dupont

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

This story about Dupont initially caught my eye because of the musical angle. They are hosting a powerhouse afternoon of great music and family fun activities on Saturday, Sept. 9, on the old Dupont School grounds. They are calling it Sing, Sling and Sting, for reasons I will let the organizer explain.

"Well, the Sing part is the music, of course," explains Dawn Jines, chairperson for the new Dupont Community Park project. "The Sling has to do with the mud-slinging Jeep, ATV and dirt bike ride we are sponsoring ... Oh, and slinging the bags in the cornhole tournament. And the Sting is a little reminder of the old school mascot, the Hornets."

The music kicks off at 2 p.m. with Danny Lee Anderson. At 4 p.m. Robert Reynold's new band 67 Sun takes the stage, with Dupont's own Darryl Hewitt on lead guitar. And at 6 p.m. a band out of Columbus called Dirty Laundry takes over. Puckett's Pizza truck "The Red Karen" will be there, too.

"The whole event is a fundraiser for the new Dupont Community Park project," explains Ann Saxe, another member of the Park Committee. "It's being built next to the old Dupont State Bank on Front Street in the heart of the historic town. Residents and children of the town won't have to cross the highway to access the park."

"Our vision is for this park to be a focal point and gathering spot for the entire Dupont community, and even beyond into Jennings County and surrounding areas," continues Dawn. "There'll be a very nice playground area, with all the latest slides and climbing attractions, plus the county's only public zipline feature.

"There will be a full basketball court, a shelter area, picnic tables and a grill. I want people to think of it as a kind of outdoor community center! The project is well underway, thanks to grants from the Bethany Foundation, the Community Foundation, the Women's Giving Circle, and more than 300 individual donations from the Dupont Citizens."

Bethany pledges $332K to fully fund Hanover Park upgrades

BY BOB DEMAREE

When bids to upgrade Hanover Community Park came in well above budget it looked like several projects might have to be scaled back or cut entirely but Bethany Legacy Foundation stepped up with a $332,588 that will now cover the cost of all work Hanover Town Council announced at it's meeting on Tuesday.

"We're helping them close that gap," said Dora Anim, CEO of Bethany Legacy Foundation, noting the Hanover park projects fit well within the healthy aspects of the organization's mission, just as the foundation contributed toward rebuilding Madison's Crystal Beach Aquatic Park.

The town of Hanover last fall was awarded a $574,412 Land and Water Conservation Fund grant from the Indiana Department of Natural Resources for improvements to Hanover Community Park. However, the grant application was nearly 17 months in the works before receiving approval and by that time rising materials and construction costs left the city getting less accomplished with the dollars funded.

The town had applied for the grant during the COVID-19 pandemic which during and after "the pricing went sky-high on building materials, blacktop, windows, doors — anything you can think of almost doubled in price," said town council member Kenny Garrett.

With the funding from the Land and Conservation grant, three projects were

Jaylen M. Green

Kentucky State Police arrested Jaylen Michael Green, 27, Carrollton, on Wednesday afternoon, charging him with Attempted Murder, a Level 1 felony; Aggravated Battery, Level 3 felony; and Battery, a Level 5 felony, on warrants issued by Jefferson County, Indiana.

Madison Police responding to a report of a disturbance in the 300 block of East First Street at approximately 3:36 on Wednesday, discovered the victim with 11 stab wounds to the upper torso of his body. The man was transported to the Norton King's Daughters' Health Emergency Room where he was treated and then flown by helicopter to a Louisville trauma center.

Meanwhile, responding Madison officers Capt. Ben McKay and Patrolmen Trent Smith and Cody Lewis were able to establish Green as the suspect and lead Det. Kyle Cutshaw was able to obtain a warrant for Green's arrest.

The investigation revealed that Green is the estranged nephew of the victim, and reportedly came to the victim's house on Tuesday asking to spend the night. For unknown reasons, Green allegedly stabbed the victim multiple times, while the man was asleep.

Kentucky State Police Trooper Colt McGuire located Jaylen Green walking in the 5800 block of U.S. 421 in Trimble County at approximately 7 p.m. Thursday. Green was taken into custody by KSP without incident and transported to Oldham County Detention Center where he remains incarcerated awaiting extradition to Indiana.

• Option 2 is to add subscriber fees to county property tax bills. This would keep the fire department organized as a KRS Chapter 273 Fire Department.

• Option 3 would be to keep everything as it is with fire department funding drawn from an annual subscription drive. However, Long indicated that presently only 19% of the county residents in his district pay fire protection subscriptions.

The options are only discussions at the present and Long urged local residents to attend committee meetings on the matter for information and input. The next scheduled meeting is Monday, Sept. 21 at 5:30 p.m. in the Fiscal Court Annex Building.

In other business, the fall swap meet in Milton is scheduled for Sept. 1-3 and Bryan Moore is being contracted to manage the event.

MCS board approves $200K to upgrade camera surveillance at MJHS, Anderson

BY BOB DEMAREE

With a continued focus on security for students of Madison Consolidated Schools, the board of trustees approved spending more than $200,000 for security camera upgrades to two schools at its meeting Wednesday.

A total of $130,410.01 was approved for Madison Junior High School and $106,719.37 for Anderson Elementary School for the purchase of Avigilon camera systems from ERS Wireless for upgrades.

"It is very important to do this upgrade for the security of our students," said board member John Wallace, who also serves as Madison Police Chief.

Superintendent Dr. Teresa Brown said the current video systems are all more than five years old and no longer receive security and firmware updates. They also do not utilize news analytics such as the ability to track intruders through the build with a click of a button.

She said he biggest bulk of the purchase from ERS Wireless would be for new AI servers to perform analytics. Some existing cameras will be reused, but additional cameras will be purchased to fill in blind spots and to cover the new wing at Anderson Elementary.

Because of the cost of the new camera systems, Brown said the plan would be to upgrade a few other buildings next year if funds are in the budget. She said the purchase of camera systems at Anderson Elementary and the junior high "are actually using old bond money for that so it's not anything we don't have budgeted."

Board member Michael Scott said he is pleased the new school year is beginning with Student Resource Officers at each of the school corporation's school buildings. "I think it was back in April that we passionately expressed a need for these positions, and here is in August and we have one in every school. I feel very good working with this board, and particularly Dr. Brown in that they just simply made it happen."

prioritized and are in the process of being completed — lighting for the baseball/softball fields and tennis court, new storage/officials building on ball field 1 and 2 that include restrooms, and tennis court refurbishment, along with new park trails.

Now, with the funds from Bethany Legacy Foundation, other projects will also be completed — restroom/storage building for the amphitheater, lighting for trail paths, construction of a back stop building on ball field 2, and refurbishment of an existing equipment storage building/garage on ball field 3.

"Bethany Legacy stepped up huge for us," said Garrett, noting "how much it means for them to step up and help us finish this project ... I can't thank them enough for what they've done, not only for us but the whole county. They've done some amazing things for the whole county, and we're really thankful for what they've done for us."

Garrett said it's "going to be busy to get these projects complete but we sure couldn't have done it without them. We're very thankful."

In other business, the council:

- Formally approved a non-favorable recommendation to change the zoning from residential to business at 4146 West State Road 56 in Hanover which had been adopted by the town's Plan Commission at its meeting July 20. With the vote the zoning change was denied.
- Approved change orders totaling $52,309 out of the contingency fund on the $6.5 million Hanover College/town of Hanover sewer project by Mac Construction. Council president Debbie Kroger she's surprised by the small number of change orders "that's huge for that big of project."
- Garrett provide an update on repairs to roof damage at the Hanover Community Building that occurred during a storm with high winds in April. Insurance has approved $68,500 for the repair with a $5,000 deductible for the town. However, the project has been on hold while the contractor and insurance adjuster sort out a disagreement on how the guttering and down spout plays into the cost.
- Treva Shelton resigned as a town council representative on the town's 5-year Master Plan steering committee and was replaced by council member Ben Sommer.

on school board, said he previously "did not have enough appreciation for what goes on behind the scenes to get these school years up and running. I would certainly like to thank the superintendent and her administrative staff for putting together a fine roster of instructors and teachers, and faculty members to get through this school year."

In other business, the board:

- A pre-bargaining public hearing for teacher contracts was held with no comments offered. Official teacher negotiations begin after Sept. 15.
- Approved the hiring of Melody Russell as a deaf and hard of hearing teacher for the school district, Natalie Brubaker as second grade teacher at Anderson Elementary and Alexandra McGillian as health teacher at Madison Junior High. Also, a change of position was approved for Adam Jones from secondary teacher at Madison Junior High to assistant principal at Anderson Elementary.
- Approved the purchase and use of "Ripple Effects for Teens" for the junior high and high school to address behaviors and their root causes. The program will be funded by the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act: Stronger Connections Grant or remaining ESSR (Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Fund).
- Approved a revision in the memorandum of understanding with the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office regarding Student Resource Officers that specifies the sheriff's office will not be responsible for paying for or funding any Tier 1 or Tier 2 law enforcement training, and not responsible for any fuel or applicable vehicle maintenance for any of the assigned vehicles.
- Approved the purchase of 2023 Endera school bus to replace one that caught fire near Deputy last spring and was completely destroyed. The cost of the new bus is $109,234 which insurance will reimburse $107,593 minus a $1,000 deductible. The cost difference is $2,641.
- Approved the hiring of a teacher and paraprofessional position to split with the Southwestern Jefferson County School Corporation as part of a Juvenile Detention Alternative Initiative (JDAI) received by the Jefferson County Courts and Jefferson County Court Services. The program provides an alternative to out-of-school suspension that provides a classroom setting with a certified teacher present with suspended juveniles reporting to the classroom for the duration of the day.
- Approved agreements to provide special education services for deaf and hard of hearing students to South Harrison Community Schools and Scott County District 2. Brown said that MCS has six deaf and hard of hearing students, and the teacher travels to the two other school districts for the service at those school corporations that do not have a teacher.

Bethany grant provides 150 AEDs throughout Jefferson County

Foundation studying placing additional units in area churches

BY BOB DEMAREE

More than 150 Automatic External Defibrillators (AEDs) are now distributed to municipal governmental agencies, schools and fire departments throughout Jefferson County through grants totaling $265,000, and there could be more given out in the future.

Dora Anim, CEO of Bethany Legacy Foundation, said the first phase of distributions was in honor of Troy Morgan, the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency director who died in June. "We thought this would be a nice thing to do in his name for his community service and honor his legacy."

But as AEDS are being distributed, they're learning more about the devices, and realizing there are more ways they can help in the community. She said there is also interest in providing AEDs in churches, along with providing training on the AEDs within the community so people will know how to use them.

There's no exact plan for when the second phase of AED distributions might happen. "We want to spend more time getting to know the churches," she said. Also, "we want to see how these go if there is anything we can learn from this first phase."

Of the 153 devices distributed, 97 went to municipal government entities — 40 to the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department, 35 to the Madison Police Department, 12 to Madison Parks Department, 7 to the Hanover Police Department and 3 to the Hanover Parks Department.

Another 41 were distributed to educational institutions — 14 to Madison Consolidated Schools, 11 to Hanover College, 8 to Southwestern Jefferson County Schools, 4 to Prince of Peace Schools (Shawe and Pope John), and 2 each to Canaan Community Academy and Christian Academy of Madison.

In addition, 15 went to fire departments — one each to Milton Township, Rykers Ridge, Madison Township, Dupont/Lancaster, Hanover Township, Deputy, Kent and Canaan fire departments in the county as well as one each to all six fire departments in the city of Madison, Fair Play No. 1, Washington No. 2, Western Fire No. 3, Walnut Street No. 4, North Madison No. 5 and Clifty No. 6. Also, one will be in the vehicle driven by the Madison fire chief.

There is also one going in the Bethany Legacy Foundation's office at 310 West Street.

The AEDs are all manufactured by Zoll AED, which Anim said was recommended locally because that's what Norton King's Daughters' Health uses, and is therefore familiar with the devices. "Everybody has different brands and different types," said Anim, noting that when first responders arrive at scenes it

DUPONT

"My hope is that it will provide a way for neighbors to once again connect and get to know one another," explains Ann. "Dupont has lost so much in the decades I've lived here, from the school to the bank and the general store. But we still have great people, and I think if we work together, maybe with this new park as a catalyst, maybe we can make some good things happen again."

"This is my home town," continues Dawn, "and I want to make it a special place for myself and my kids and my neighbors. This park is just a beginning. I want to see sidewalks and walking trails and a new general store and maybe a school once again. Basically, a little charming Hallmark town growing and thriving right here in our little corner of Indiana. People may say I'm dreaming too big, but I say it can't hurt, and you never know until you try.

"I guess I would say, to anybody looking for that quiet country life, but with a sense of community and pride, come on out and take a look at Dupont. Join us and help make it happen. There is nothing keeping us from making this the place we want it to be!"

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

Last Saturday I took full advantage of Madison's downtown magical mystery musical walking tour. I started at Thomas Family Winery with one of my favorite acts, Tim Brickley and the Bleeding Hearts. After an hour or so there, I walked up "Mural Alley" to the Taproom and caught the tail end of Vaguely Familiar's set. Their powerhouse version of Freddie King's "Goin' Down" could have been the perfect denouement to the evening. But no, we didn't stop there! We walked on over to First Street Saloon where Joe & Deano had the whole joint boppin' and dancing. And finally, on our way back to the car, we stuck our heads into The Drake Lounge where Erik Brunner was just finishing up with his famous looped rendition of "Babba O'Reily" by The Who. It's like this every weekend in Madison, every Friday and Saturday, and it's there for the taking! If you're local, get downtown and partake. If you are from out of town, make plans now for a fun and wonderful weekend in Indiana's Music City!

Project to restore stained glass at First Baptist has proven inspirational

BY TAYLOR WILLIAMS
PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

First Baptist Church of Carrollton held a dedication ceremony last month to unveil its newly restored stained glass windows. A month later and Pastor Christopher White is still proud of the repairs and beautiful windows which took from June 2021 to November 2022 to complete.

The dedication ceremony included Rhonda L. Deeg, the stained glass artisan and owner of RLD Glass Art & Restoration LLC, who led the project. She explained to those in attendance the history of the stained glass windows and spoke of each window — from the panes, the history of the glass, the colors chosen, what was rare about the window, what was hard to replace on the window — as she walked through the sanctuary.

"It was very, very good, especially when she was explaining the history of different colors in the glass and the value of different colors and how some versions of glass are not produced anymore," White said, "She had a big box with her that she had all these sections of glass from the windows that had been replaced and she was just holding onto them in case she ever had to come back."

Following Degg's presentation, White gave his sermon based on the four symbols that are contained in the main stained glass window at the back of the sanctuary. The four symbols include a crown with a cross in the center to symbolize Jesus being crowned through suffering, a dove with an olive leaf in its mouth to reference Noah's Arc, a blue royal crown to represent the royalty of Jesus as the son of God, and an anchor to reference a page in the Book of Hebrews.

While also explained a ritual that he likes to follow before church begins each Sunday.

"I come in very early on Sunday mornings and I like being in this room on Sunday mornings alone," White said. "Of course, it's dark when I'm here. But the streetlights shine through the stained glass, and so when the room is still dark, I can see light through this back window."

White said the light shining through the stained glass creates a sight that is inspirational to him and helps him think about the day, his life, what the symbols mean to him, and more.

White said First Baptist, located in a pre-Civil War building, has no official records related to the stained glass windows and is therefore unaware of how long it has been since the last renovation. He said it is possible that the records were destroyed in the 1937 Flood. Regardless, the windows are very important to the church and its congregation. Although their origin is unknown, their role in church history is well celebrated by serving as a backdrop to generations of wedding ceremonies and photos, celebrations and services.

He said the structures for the window were installed around 1898 give or take a few years. Plans to repair the stained glass windows began around 2020 when Scott Nab, chairman of the trustees at the church, observed that the windows had become poorly presented in the church. From the outside, they still seemed relatively beautiful but from the inside there was decay and damage from attempts to reconstruct.

That was when Nab contacted Becky Patton Smith at Ghent Baptist Church, which had previously done its own stained glass restoration. Smith recommended Degg to help examine the windows.

Degg said the main window needed quite a bit of work but other windows in the church were fine and didn't need repair.

"She showed us all the pieces of glass that had been replaced through the years and segments of the windows that didn't even match other segments of the window," White said, "Not to mention a fine concrete wash that was on it that someone had done years ago to fill in cracks. We just didn't even realize the quality of the window was so low — we kept thinking it looked so pretty."

Inspired by the similar project at Ghent Baptist Church, First Baptist embarked on a $31,139.49 restoration project to bring its windows back to their former glory and make them look how they would've first looked in 1898.

First there was six months of planning before repairs could properly begin. Work actually began in June of 2021 by removing two panels at a time to repair damages to them and them moving on to the others.

As the work progressed, White caught glimpses of how the project was going. "I saw them removing these windows and the window frames from the wall, which was very difficult and it took real skill to get these windows out. And they take two at a time and put plywood up," he said, "In fact, people kept calling because they saw the plywood from the street and they thought maybe people had thrown rocks or something and broken our stained glass."

At times White had his doubts about whether the project would be a success. It reminded him of another daunting task when the church helped start Big Brothers Big Sisters in Carrollton.

"When Scott first brought it up and what it would cost and all of that, I had a definite hesitation about the project, the scope, the cost, and just honestly, the relevance," White said. "I just wasn't certain it was that relevant of a need to sink that much money into. And I was totally wrong. It is completely relevant and it was a really good idea."

As the project wrapped up and the windows were all returned to their places in the sanctuary, their beauty proved inspirational. The windows are not only enjoyed by church patrons but there for all to view, especially at either of the two Sunday sermons weekly.

Pastor Christopher White of First Baptist Church of Carrollton says the newly refurbished stained glass windows in the church sanctuary provide inspiration before his Sunday services.

can take them a few seconds longer to operate an AED if it's an unfamiliar brand. "We thought if we make it consistent, it can save seconds," she said adding that doing that could save a life if all are the same.

Although Bethany Legacy Foundation is providing the AEDs, each entity will be responsible for maintenance, safety and making sure they have operating batteries.

On Wednesday, it was announced that Hanover College has received a $104,000 planning grant from Bethany Legacy Foundation to identify and ultimately reduce the county's healthcare disparities.

"With a shortage of health professions in our county, we are excited to focus on workforce in order to retain local talent but also attract new talent to our county in mental and health-focused positions," Anim said.

The grant will fund market research, economic and health impact analysis, focus groups and conversations with area residents and partners. The information collected will be used by Hanover and Ivy Tech Community College's Madison campus to identify academic programs and community initiatives to address health deficits in the county and improve specific health outcomes.

Based on research analysis, Hanover and Ivy Tech will establish or enhance specific academic and co-curricular programs that will address the area's prominent wellness issues. Each institution will create offerings that best fit their missions and, where possible, establish partnerships that will improve educational attainment and health outcomes in Jefferson County.

Solutions identified by Hanover and Ivy Tech through this partnership could provide residents and students with educational opportunities in high-need healthcare professions such as in mental health, psychiatric nursing, elder care, physician assistant roles, social work, and public health.

The programs could also establish clinical opportunities for scholars. Students participating in clinical and mental health programs could provide free or low-cost services to the area residents as part of their education. Through this community connection, Hanover and Ivy Tech graduates may be incentivized to remain in the region to work for area employers.

Hanover College President Lake Lambert said, "We are tremendously grateful to the Bethany Legacy Foundation for funding this important work that will enable us to serve the community more effectively. This is truly a win-win for the college, its partners, and Jefferson County."

Consider Health Planning When Thinking About Retirement Planning

"Numerous options exist for a safe place to keep your money; the secret is finding the best return without any exposure to risk." Steve Dybwad

Health Planning For Retirement: Frequently Asked Questions

You may think that retirement is a long way off, especially if you've recently changed jobs, started a family, or are sending children to college. While planning for retirement may not necessarily be at the top of your

How Concerned Should I Be About Health Care Retirement Planning?

Health benefits are normally worth thousands of dollars and, as such, protect you against financial risk in case of illness or accident. While It is easy to take health benefits provided by an employer for granted unless your company provides full retiree health benefits, once you retire, you'll need to figure out how to cover these costs or a portion of them on your own, including monthly premiums, co-payments and other out of pocket health expenses in your retirement budget.

What are my Health Care Options if I Retire Before Age 65?

Your employer must make coverage available for up to 18 months if you retire before turning age 65. If you retire before age 63 1/2, evaluate your health coverage needs, including doctor visits, prescription drugs, and potential long-term coverage.

If I Retire At Age 65, What Will My Medicare Options Be?

Beginning in 2006, a new prescription drug plan that is available to everyone with Medicare benefits took effect. Join a Medicare prescription drug plan as soon as you are eligible because, if you wait, you may pay a penalty to join later. Plans vary by cost, the number of drugs covered, and pharmacies you can use, but all plans must meet a minimum standard for drug coverage that Medicare sets. Work with your doctor and a Medicare health plan provider to find the Medicare Part D plan that best meets your prescription drug needs. Determining your Medicare eligibility and benefits can be difficult on your own, so be sure to enlist the help of your trusted financial planner, who has years of experience helping people just like you sort out their healthcare options for the future.

As A Woman, What Should I Keep In Mind About Retirement?

It's a statistically proven fact that women tend to live longer than men, and experts say they are 50 percent more likely than men to need long-term care. Because of this, married women should be involved in all aspects of retirement planning and budgeting of the couple's pensions, Social Security, and savings, as well as their long-term care options. Couples should especially consider purchasing a long-term care policy in the older spouse's name to preserve their savings.

According to The Office on Women's Health, more than 50 million American women are postmenopausal, and within the next 20 years, this number is expected to increase to 60 million. As postmenopausal women head into retirement, they should be aware of special health and dietary needs. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends women keep up-to-date with health screenings such as mammograms and colorectal cancer tests. Women experience an increased risk of heart disease, osteoporosis, and certain types of cancer. This is a time when a diet rich in fiber and calcium, along with plenty of exercise, can improve your overall health.

FOOTBALL PREVIEW

Area teams ready to kick off season

BY THE COURIER STAFF

All four area high school football teams will be in action on Friday as the 2023 season gets under way in both Indiana and Kentucky.

Both Madison and Trimble County will open on the road while Carroll County and Switzerland County get home openers. While Carroll County appears set for a run at the district title, the other three teams are all rebuilding after suffering massive losses to graduation.

A closer look at all four teams:

MADISON CUBS

Leroy Wilson enters his fifth season at the helm of the Cubs and Madison has improved or maintained its win total from the previous season each year.

Last year's Cubs went 4-6 — the program's best record in eight years — and Madison's 10 wins over the past three seasons are the squad's best in nearly decade.

But Madison hasn't had a winning season since current athletic director Patric Morrison's team went 6-5 in 2014, and the Cubs will have to rise up against a difficult schedule if they want to end that streak.

Madison opens the season with a long road trip for the third-straight season, only this time the Cubs will be heading two hours north to near Indianapolis instead of two hours south into the heart of Kentucky. Madison travels to Greenfield-Central on Friday for the first-ever meeting between the two programs and what likely will be their only meeting. Next year, Madison is scheduled to face old rival Scottsburg in the opening week.

Madison follows that trip to Greenfield-Central with a road contest at traditional foe South Dearborn before its home opener against Providence on Sept. 1. The home opener will mark the seventh time that Madison and Providence have met on the gridiron, but the first since the 1982 season. Providence has won all six previous meetings.

Following the Providence game, Madison welcomes Carroll County to Cub Field for a first time ever. The two schools have played twice in history, but both games were in Carrollton. The 2021 scheduled game in Madison was canceled when Carroll was sidelined with COVID-19.

Madison will play only four home games this season: Providence, Sept. 1; Carroll County, Sept 8; Brownstown, Sept. 29; and Milan, Oct. 13.

The Cubs will travel five times: Greenfield-Central, Aug. 18; South Dearborn, Aug. 25; Jennings County, Sept. 15; Mitchell, Sept. 22; and Bedford North Lawrence, Oct. 6.

CARROLL CO. PANTHERS

Carroll County went 7-5 last season and reached the second round of the KHSAA Class 2A Gridiron Bowl Playoffs, but returns a veteran roster that is itching to make up ground.

Hill had nine kills on 13-for-14 hitting, three aces and four assists, Owens had six kills on 10-for-10 hitting and three aces on 9-for-10 serving, and Rorie Scroggins had four kills and a block.

Reds finally beat Guardians' Syndergaard

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Stuart Fairchild and Matt McLain hit two-run homers in the fourth inning and Cincinnati handed Cleveland's Noah Syndergaard his first loss in 10 career starts against the Reds with a 7-2 victory over the Guardians on Wednesday night.

TJ Friedl had three hits, scored three runs and made two spectacular catches in center field to back rookie left-hander Andrew Abbott (8-3) and help the Reds split the two-game Ohio Cup series. They are due to play Sept. 26-27 in Cleveland.

"Friedl was a huge factor," Cleveland manager Terry Francona said. "He scored three and took away two. He was all over the place tonight.

The sloppy Guardians committed a season-high four errors.

Abbott (8-3) didn't walk anybody while giving up six hits and two runs with five strikeouts in five innings.

Friedl saved Abbott a two-run homer when he leaped above the fence to rob Ramón Laureano and end the third. Friedl followed by flagging down Oscar Gonzalez's drive one step before crashing into the wall to start the fourth.

"We practiced that today," Friedl said. "We literally lined up in shallow right field and set up the machine. While the pitchers and infielders were doing PFP (pitchers fielding practice), we were working on robbing home runs."

"Friedl's catch was just sick," McLain said. "That's all I've got to say. When he hit it I was like, 'I think that's gone.' Then I saw him track it and it will be close. He just went up and robbed it. It was cool."

"I asked TJ if he could dunk after that," manager David Bell said. "He said he could if he could palm the ball. He really got up. He's always looking to make a difference in the game and then his ability takes over, but it all starts with his desire to do something to help us win a game."

Friedl couldn't track down Gabriel Arias's 429-foot drive to center on Abbott's changeup leading off the fifth.

Reds relievers Fernando Cruz, Sam Moll, Derek Law and Alan Busenitz combined to allow three hits in four shutout innings.

Syndergaard (2-6), acquired from the Dodgers on July 26, lasted 4 1/3 innings, allowing eight hits and six runs, five earned, with two walks and three strikeouts while falling to 7-1 against the Reds.

"They capitalized on poor execution," he said. "It felt like I was pitching on ice. Every time I would try to use my legs, they would slip out underneath me. I had issues gripping the ball today. I had multiple changeups where I had no grip on the ball."

Cincinnati (63-59), which surpassed its 2022 win total, went into the game tied with the Cubs for third in the NL Central. .

Following Friedl's two-out single, McLain lined a 2-2 changeup 377 feet into the seats down the left field line. He finished with three hits and three RBIs.

GUARDIANS 3, REDS 0

Logan Allen is solidifying his role as another reliable rookie starter for the Cleveland Guardians.

The 24-year-old had his best outing since July 18, allowing four hits over six innings as Cleveland got consecutive victories for the first time in three weeks with a 3-0 win over Cincinnati on Tuesday night.

Allen (6-5) struck out seven and walked three for the Guardians, who had not strung together wins since three in a row from July 25-27. It was the third straight strong start by a Cleveland rookie following outings by Gavin Williams and Tanner Bibee.

Enyel De Los Santos struck out pinch-hitter Joey Votto to strand a runner on second in the seventh. Trevor Stephan retired the side on order in the eighth, and Emmanuel Clase pitched a one-hit ninth for his 32nd save in 41 chances, giving the Guardians their 13th shutout.

Boundary-bouncer experiences backslide

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: My wife and I have a strained relationship with my parents, who live out of state.

They stay with us and our two young children about twice a year.

Some of their visits have been rocky (two years ago they visited us while having active cases of Covid, and didn't tell us in advance that they were ill).

My mother and I went through therapy to work on our relationship, and now I set boundaries and ask that these boundaries be respected.

We offered to host my parents for five days on their most recent visit, as any more time with them would be hard on us.

After the visit, which went well, my mom asked why they were allowed to stay for only five days. She said they would have liked to stay longer.

How should I respond?

— Boundary-building Bob

Dear Bob: I appreciate your question, because your experience highlights a typical trajectory with a chronic boundary-bouncer.

You identified this problem and took it to a therapist (a great choice!), and your mother joined you there (a great choice on her part).

You two worked things out, and you put your therapy into practice. You presented your boundary with clarity, and this resulted in a good visit with your folks.

And then your mother experienced a bit of a backslide, resorting to familiar behaviors as a way to bounce over your boundary. Her weapons of choice are subtle manipulations, perhaps also throwing in a bit of sadness in order to press her case.

This is her way to get her needs met, and because it has worked in the past, she has reason to believe it will work now.

She has opened the door for a refresher course in abiding with reasonable boundaries.

You could say, "Your visit went really well for all of us, and I'm crediting our therapy for helping both of us to create and respect boundaries. Thank you for that, Mom."

I have not suggested diving into an extended conversation about her wants or needs, because, like a good door-to-door salesperson, once she gets her foot in the door, she will wedge it open.

This is your house, your family, and your life. I hope you will continue to take good care of yourself and your family by respectfully maintaining your boundaries. Ultimately this will result in a better relationship with your folks, building more positive experiences, which may lead to expanded boundaries.

Neighbors might wonder about son's incarceration

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: My son is in prison. In a few months his sentence for drug possession and a probation violation (for possession) will be completed.

His charges are nonviolent offenses, and he has worked hard to get control over his addiction.

My son and his fiancee have a 3-year-old child together.

The fiancee and child live in our second home in another state — the same state where he is serving his sentence.

We are at our second home four months out of the year.

I need help with what to say to neighbors who are curious about why our son's fiancee lives in our home with their child (for three years) and then — my son shows up.

I'm sure they'll ask since they seem very curious about her situation but have, so far, not asked any direct questions of her or us.

Our neighbors are very conservative, older, and talk often about the perceived "crime" wave due to the homeless and addicted.

Do you have any suggestions for the questions that (I feel) are bound to arise: such as, "Where has your son been all this time?"

I love my son and he has paid dearly for his substance abuse (truly a disease).

He's served his sentence and deserves a chance.

He will likely be living in our second home with his fiancée and child for some time due to financial constraints and I'd like to have an answer for those neighbors (mostly one in particular) who may ask.

We are not close with any of our neighbors and some, like us, are only there a few months out of the year and likely won't notice or care, but I'm not good at thinking "on my feet," so I'd like to have an answer prepared for anyone who asks.

Can you help?

— Worried Mother

Dear Worried: You should ask your son and his fiancee what they would prefer you to say, but I'm wondering if you would consider telling the truth: "My son has been incarcerated for nonviolent drug offenses related to his addiction. He served his sentence, is in recovery for his addiction, and now he is happily home. We're delighted to have him back."

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Someone may seek your company for financial gain rather than your sparkling personality. You might feel uncomfortable if you are being used as a security blanket by someone else. Focus on making money work for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You could lead someone to a list of original ideas and help them to make the best use of them. You may feel embarrassed to enter the spotlight, but a shy demeanor might actually make people clamor more for your presence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Put your emotions on hold for now. You may feel different in the future so try not to slam the door in someone's face or engage in serious discussions. Someone could make a flattering remark that hides a hidden agenda.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Public meetings could be tedious; stifle the yawns during possible boring events. Your sympathies could be invoked by someone's story, and you may be prompted to donate some of your money to a worthy cause.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You could be impacted by something which makes you more sensitive to your surroundings than usual. Your warmth and understanding can help melt the heart of even the most hardhearted individuals who may show up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You can be more popular if you downplay the negatives, but be authentic while still sharing fascinating ideas. It may be time to understand the benefits of having a confidant or supportive friend by your side to watch your back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You could be pressuring someone for a commitment, only to find your tactics might backfire. Everyone can see the writing on the wall, but by applying warmth or understanding you might make the message palatable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You may have heard that the ones who travel alone can travel the fastest, but a good-natured companion could be just what you need to benefit from trending concepts or the latest technological advancements.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Give your drive for financial success a greater scope. When there is too much time on your hands or if you feel insecure you may join the crowd, but don't let a herd mentality encourage the exclusion of someone close to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Analyze things before you finalize them. You and a loved one might tear apart your relationship to see how the pieces work. If you share a set of values, there can be a solid foundation that could withstand adjustments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Try not to expect too much from a casual lunch date or outing. Consider the big picture and how the world at large can affect your ability to achieve your long-term goals. You may expect improvements with your finances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — There may be clues that social climbing could be the primary benefit of attending a group gathering. By all means, follow the rules and honor the promises or agreements you have made in the past.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Arguments may not be necessary. Perfect harmony can be achieved if you are willing to listen to your intuitions and give your inner child the ability to express themselves. You might easily go overboard to impress someone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Check the odds before you spin the roulette wheel. You could be fond of making extravagant gestures. Don't let your enthusiasm for social activities or the desire to be the center of fun cause you to take risks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — There might be a little voice nagging or reminding you of your mistakes. You could have allowed those old issues to drag you from the life you want. Take the steps you need to understand and your inner self for forgiveness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You cannot obtain your desires unless you are willing to tell loved ones about your dreams. Meet up with the perfect partner to achieve your long-term objectives and find a way to accomplish your mutual goals together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your idealistic and spiritual side could be enhanced, but increased sensitivity might make this a time to avoid unhappy people or stressful surroundings. Extend your idealism to your business or financial ambitions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — A new friendship might be emerging on your social horizon, but try to avoid making snap judgments until all the facts are in. Offering empathy or displaying compassion can work wonders on possibly sticky situations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Education is the one thing you can get that cannot be taken away. You might make some headway with your ambitions by finding a new mentor or volunteering your time to gain some valuable experiences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Other people may be happy to share knowledge, but blaze the trails that you can only follow. You may yearn to have more freedom or to fly solo. Practice hops could be necessary before you can reach the lead position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Ignorance can really be bliss. Sometimes it can be what you do not know or refuse to acknowledge that could keep you out of hot water. Worrying about what people might think could sap the strength of a relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Discovering creative ways of using the latest information can tempt you to act independently, and without consulting a partner or your loved ones. You may learn about ways to leverage money for your benefit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Your loved ones or companions may be filled with drive and determination that might rub off on you. Listen to your intuition about monetary affairs and communicate your feelings or needs with your loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — The life you are living is your feedback loop. If you listen to sad stories or songs, you could end up melancholy. If you listen to upbeat music or surround yourself with kind people you can end up an optimist.

Taylor exits training camp for the 2nd time in a week

Team calls it an 'excused absence'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WESTFIELD — Indianapolis Colts running back Jonathan Taylor left the team's training camp complex for the second time in a week, team officials confirmed in a statement.

The announcement came shortly before Indy and the Chicago Bears held the first of two joint practices at Grand Park in Westfield, Indiana, about a 30-minute drive from team headquarters on the city's west side.

The 2021 NFL rushing champion has been on the physically unable to perform list since reporting to camp July 25. He had offseason ankle surgery.

"Jonathan Taylor returned to Indianapolis to continue his rehab, however he had a personal matter arise," the team said. "He is not currently with the team and his absence is excused."

Taylor left the facility last week to continue rehabbing after the injury forced him to miss six games last season. The former Wisconsin Badgers star also has been embroiled in an ugly contract dispute as he enters the final season of his rookie contract. Taylor is scheduled to make about $4.3 million this year.

Taylor has been one of several prominent running backs leaguewide to publicly complain about how backs are valued given the franchise tag currently sits at $10.1 million — the lowest of any position other than kickers and punters.

Colts owner Jim Irsay and Taylor met for about an hour in Irsay's motorhome during the first night practice at camp.

Afterward, Irsay said he remained hopeful Taylor would play and play well this season. Then word leaked that Taylor had requested a trade.

The New Jersey prep star produced two 2,000-yard seasons for the Badgers and nearly did it again during his second season with the Colts when he finished with a league-best 1,811 yards. His 20 total TDs that season also tied for the most in the league.

But after totaling 2,980 yards and 29 TD runs in his first two NFL seasons, Taylor missed six games because of the ankle and wound up with 861 yards, four TDs and an average of 4.5 yards per carry — all career lows.

Chiefs to play Mahomes, other starters for 1st half vs. Arizona

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The Kansas City Chiefs plan to play Patrick Mahomes and the rest of their starters for the first half of their preseason game in Arizona, where they were last seen walking off the field hoisting their second Lombardi Trophy in four years.

Chiefs coach Andy Reid said upon wrapping up training camp at Missouri Western on Thursday that the starters would get the first half and backups would split the second half. That's in line with what Reid has done since the league trimmed the preseason to three games and is designed to help Mahomes and the rest of his guys get ready for the speed of the regular season.

"They have to get ready for the game," Reid said ahead of Saturday night's game against the Cardinals, "and at the same time, I think it's tough going into the first game — the first regular-season game. It's going to be fast, much faster than you can present in practice. So this is at least another step up from that, another kick up speed-wise to the game."

Mahomes and the starters played only one series in their preseason opener in New Orleans, putting together a promising drive that ultimately stalled near midfield on a failed fourth-and-short conversion attempt. The second preseason game is closer to a dress rehearsal for their Sept. 7 opener against Detroit, which is why Mahomes will play into the second quarter.

Nevertheless, Reid acknowledged a balancing act between preparing for the season and the risk of injury in a preseason game.

"That's all part of the game," he said.

The Chiefs need look no further than last season's playoffs for proof that injuries can happen suddenly.

Mahomes was twisted to the turf in the divisional round against Jacksonville, sustaining a high ankle sprain that he had to manage the rest of their Super Bowl run; he even aggravated it in the championship win over Philadelphia, limping through most of the second half.

Even if Mahomes doesn't necessarily need the preseason reps, the rest of the Chiefs offense probably does.

They allowed both of their starting offensive tackles to leave in free agency, and Jawaan Taylor and Donovan Smith are still getting comfortable as the replacements. They also lost veteran wide receivers JuJu Smith-Schuster and Mecole Hardman, which means the Chiefs could lean heavily on two players yet to take a regular-season snap in Rashee Rice and Justyn Ross.

"I thought those guys got better and better (in camp)," Mahomes said of his wide receivers Thursday. "They learned how to finish and keep that mentality throughout practice. They have a lot of talent but you have to learn how to be consistent every day, and I thought they got better and better at that as they went."

Mahomes also was pleased with the way Taylor and Smith have worked with perhaps the league's best interior offensive line, anchored by Pro Bowl center Creed Humphrey with guards Joe Thuney and Trey Smith on either side of him.

"The offensive line did a great job throughout camp just battling," Mahomes said.

Mahomes was asked Thursday how he would feel stepping on the field in Arizona, where the Chiefs rallied to beat the Eagles in February. But in typical fashion, Mahomes preferred to talk about what the Chiefs must do to get back to the Super Bowl, rather than look back on winning his second championship ring.

"We have a lot of stuff we have to continue to work on," Mahomes said. "I said it after the ring ceremony, 'That's it.' We're going to go back and try to get another one."

THE TITANS ARE RELIEVED THAT BURKS' KNEE INJURY ISN'T SERIOUS

EAGAN, Minn. — The Tennessee Titans have avoided a major injury for wide receiver Treylon Burks' left knee.

Titans coach Mike Vrabel said Thursday after the second day of joint practice with the Minnesota Vikings that Burks suffered no structural damage.

"I don't think it's going to be a long-term thing," Vrabel said. "I'm not putting a timetable on it, but I think it was a best-case scenario."

NFL Network, citing unidentified sources, reported that Burks sprained his lateral collateral ligament and will be sidelined for at least two weeks. The LCL stretches along the outside of the knee from the femur to the fibula. Burks was hurt Wednesday after catching a deep pass in a one-on-one drill, when he fell to the grass after stumbling forward and needed assistance off the field after limping to his feet and clutching his knee.

"We'll rehab him, and I know he'll work hard to get back," Vrabel said. "When he's ready to come back out he'll help us."

The Titans have higher expectations for their air attack this year after producing the third-fewest passing yards in the NFL last season, with the addition of three-time All-Pro wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins and the emergence of Burks, their 2022 first-round draft pick.

The Titans have led the league in each of the past two seasons for most players used because of injuries. They set an NFL record for a non-strike season with 91 players in 2021. Over the past two years, 137 players have seen action with the Titans, just ahead of the Chicago Bears (133) for the most in the league.

Richardson named starter for Colts in opener vs. Jags

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WESTFIELD — Anthony Richardson's first NFL start convinced the Indianapolis Colts that he's ready to keep the job.

On Tuesday, three days after the fourth overall draft pick made his pro debut at Buffalo, coach Shane Steichen ended the suspense by naming Richardson the Colts' opening day starter.

Richardson's regular-season debut, on Sept. 10 against Jacksonville, will mark the seventh straight year Indy has had a different Week 1 starter. It began when Scott Tolzien replaced the injured Andrew Luck in 2017. The Colts are hoping Richardson's ascent to the No. 1 spot on the depth chart ends the revolving door.

"I just started working my tail off every day," Richardson said. "I didn't want to come here and make it seem like everything was handed to me because it definitely shouldn't be."

When the Colts reported to training camp on July 25, general manager Chris Ballard insisted the team wouldn't rush Richardson onto the field. Instead, Indy wanted to make sure the rookie was ready to play.

Richardson opened camp splitting first-team snaps with veteran Gardner Minshew but worked most of last week with the starters. Minshew signed with Indy as a free agent during the offseason.

On Thursday, Steichen told reporters Richardson would start the preseason opener as the competition continued. But after reviewing Saturday's footage, Steichen informed Richardson and Minshew of his decision Monday night.

Richardson was 7 of 12 with 67 yards and one interception — on his third pass attempt — against the Bills, who didn't play many starters. The 6-foot-4, 244-pound former Florida star also had two carries for seven yards, though his longest run of the day was called back on a holding call.

Minshew was understandably disappointed by Steichen's decision.

"You're hurt, obviously, you put so much time into something," Minshew said. "But I'm really excited for Anthony, man, I think he's going to be really special. He's got a great opportunity here, and we're going to try to figure out what's next."

Richardson was considered one of the draft's most intriguing prospects.

He dazzled scouts with a strong arm at the NFL's annual scouting combine and some described Richardson's overall performance as the most athletic they'd ever seen by a quarterback.

The Colts weren't surprised. On draft weekend, Ballard recalled a phone conversation he had with a scout while the scout watched Richardson working out with the Gators before last season.

Still, some questioned his readiness to play immediately after he completed just 54.7% of his throws while going 6-7 as the Gators' starter. And once Richardson returned to Indy, he needed to learn the playbook and earn the respect of coaches and teammates.

Mission accomplished.

"He's a good leader. I think he's getting comfortable and getting to know him, he's a humble dude," safety Julian Blackmon said. "I'm just excited to see what he can do — he can do everything — it's just in terms of what plays he makes."

Now the progression must continue against bigger, stronger and more challenging NFL defenses and at a faster speed. There's no time to waste.

The Colts close camp this week at Grand Park in Westfield, Indiana, about a 30-minute drive from team headquarters, with joint practices against the Chicago Bears on Wednesday and Thursday. They play again Saturday, when Richardson appears at Lucas Oil Stadium for the first time since the combine.

Steichen hasn't said if or how much Richardson will play this weekend and it may depend, at least in part, on what the Colts do during this week's workouts. So far, though, they like the results.

"He had the early interception (Saturday), but he bounced back and made some really good plays, some really good throws," Steichen said. "And then the way he uses his legs, it definitely helps us."

And while Jonathan Taylor's return to action remains clouded after he rejoined the team in Grand Park on Tuesday, one thing is clear: Richardson will be Indy's starter for the foreseeable future.

"He's a big-time playmaker and it's been showcased throughout camp," Steichen said. "He, obviously, did some good things in that preseason game and I think he brings us that playmaking ability."

Purdue hopes Card is next ace at the 'Cradle of Quarterbacks'

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hudson Card thinks he can become Purdue's new ace.

Those inside the program are firm believers, too.

First-year coach Ryan Walters raves about Card's mobility, receivers like Card's arm strength and accuracy, and now, after just a few months on campus, the Boilermakers are going all-in on the former Texas star emerging as the next big thing at the "Cradle of Quarterbacks."

"I think that was part of the reason that made me want to come here — they produce quarterbacks who go to the league," Card said. "That's something I want to end up eventually doing. It's really cool to be a part of that, and, hopefully, I can carry on the tradition."

The roll call includes names such as Len Dawson and Bob Griese, Gary Danielson and Jim Everett, Drew Brees and Kyle Orton, and most recently Aidan O'Connell, the walk-on now in his first training camp with the Las Vegas Raiders.

At 6-foot-2, 210 pounds, Card has prototypical size. Walters said he also thinks Card's athleticism will not only give the Boilermakers a different look from the drop-back style and bubble screens that have defined Purdue football for more than 25 years but create headaches for defenses, too.

"What I like the most about Hudson is he came in, put his head down and went to work and I think that helps you immediately gain the respect of your teammates," Walters said. "His talent jumped out when we started spring ball and he's got great arm talent. He can run as well."

If Card makes that quick, smooth transition, the defending Big Ten West champions could use last season's momentum to propel them forward and rekindle memories of Brees, another Texas prep star who chose Purdue.

Card couldn't think of a better pairing.

"On my recruiting visit I did speak with him (Brees)," Card said. "He just told me about his experience at Purdue and that was something that helped me with my decision."

WALTERS WELCOMED

Walters brings a different perspective to the Purdue sideline, having spent most of his coaching career exclusively on the defensive side of the ball.

But like former Indianapolis Colts coach Tony Dungy, Walters played quarterback in high school and college before moving to the secondary. It's an experience that could help Walters in his first head coaching job.

"Playing safety, you are kind of the quarterback of the defense," he said. "But there's a reason I hired Graham Harrell and there's a reason I wanted Hudson Card. It's because I think that style of play is what college football is today. It's what I hate to see on defense on Saturdays."

THE MOCK

Devin Mockobee started last summer as a walk-on running back buried at No. 4 on the depth chart. He finished the season as Purdue's top rusher (968 yards) and a school freshman record of four 100-yard games.

With Mockobee expected to carry a heavier load in 2023, one of Walters' first moves was awarding his No. 1 back a scholarship.

"Devin looks like a different player," Walters said. "He's transformed his body. He obviously has talent and skill set to have success in this conference, that's proven."

THE SCHEDULE

Purdue faces a daunting schedule after opening the season Sept. 2 against Fresno State, its only non-power conference foe.

The Boilermakers then visit Virginia Tech and host Syracuse before Wisconsin visits for a Friday night showdown.

Walters faces his old boss, Illinois coach Bret Bielema, on Sept. 30. Then comes a four-game stretch with trips to Iowa, Nebraska and Michigan with one home game sprinkled in — Oct. 14 against Ohio State.

Conference realignment shakes up recruiting landscape

BY CLIFF BRUNT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Conference realignment has widened the recruiting footprint for Power Five college football programs long before many teams open play in their new league homes.

Oklahoma and Texas accepted invitations to join the Southeastern Conference back in 2021 and programs have been adjusting ever since. The dominoes continue to fall, with the SEC and Big Ten getting stronger, the Big 12 expanding, the Pac-12 left as a shell of its former self and the Atlantic Coast Conference facing angst from the likes of Florida State.

The Big Ten has seen the most significant shift, at least in terms of geography. With Southern California, UCLA, Washington and Oregon leaving the Pac-12 for the Big Ten next year, the sprawling conference will boast programs from the West Coast all the way to New Jersey.

The only domestic time zone missing from the Big Ten will be Mountain.

"For recruiting purposes, it sort of shrinks the idea of of going far away from home," said Adam Gorney, the national recruiting director for Rivals. "If you were a kid in Arizona and you were a little hesitant to go to Ohio State, well, you are going to come back and play in the West once or twice, three times a year now."

Realignment also has made conference stability a more critical recruiting piece as young men try to figure out exactly what they are getting into.

"Recruiting is a game of inches, and you never know which inch is going to be the one to add up for you having a prospect go in your favor," said Steve Wiltfong, director of recruiting for 247Sports. "Once you solidify your future, it allows prospects to know what that road map looks like from their perspective."

ACC

Florida State President Rick McCullough believes the Seminoles will have to consider leaving the ACC unless there is a "radical change to the revenue distribution." That kind of uncertainty can affect other members of a conference, especially with the issues coming from one of the league's marquee members.

The ACC has had talks about adding Pac-12 members California and Stanford — Gorney said that would be an upgrade for both schools — but the ACC has not agreed to anything at this point. Such additions would expand the ACC to the West Coast. But that impact might be lessened if a program such as Florida State leaves. And the longer uncertainty looms, the harder it is to recruit.

BIG 12

Things looked bleak for the Big 12 when Oklahoma and Texas chose to switch, but the league added Houston, BYU, Cincinnati and Central Florida beginning this season.

The new schools were not in Power Five conferences last season. The jump already is paying off for UCF coach Gus Malzahn, who has used his new tool when going head-to-head with Miami, Florida and Florida State for players.

"It's a huge advantage," Malzahn said. "Now that we're in the Power Five recruiting, we recruit against the three larger schools in the state, and it's been a game changer as far as that."

BYU coach Kalani Sitake said his program also is drawing more interest.

"I think it increases, maybe gets a little bit of curiosity for people that never thought about BYU as a destination to play," he said. "It's just opened the doors and widened our net in recruiting."

Next year, the Big 12 will grow again when it adds Colorado, Arizona, Arizona State and Utah from the Pac-12.

BIG TEN

Oregon immediately became a more attractive destination once it joined the Big Ten. Days after the announcement, USC commitment Dakoda Fields, a highly ranked cornerback, flipped to Oregon.

The move underscores the fact that USC will not be alone out West in enjoying the perks of Big Ten membership. Like USC, the Ducks will get to play on some of the biggest stages in college football — Michigan, Penn State and Ohio State — when they join the conference in 2024.

"The exposure they're going to get and the development they're going to be able to see for NFL purposes is absolutely huge," Gorney said.

Nebraska, a Big Ten program that has seen its influence shrink, could regain some of its West Coast reach that landed the Huskers greats such as Jarvis Redwine, Steve Taylor and Lawrence Phillips from California in past generations.

"I don't think Nebraska is going to come in to California and have half of their class be California players," Gorney said. "But there could be wins there along the line that weren't there before because now USC and UCLA are in that conference."

Gorney said a downside could be the newest Big Ten schools running into problems when West Coast recruits consider braving the cold and snow late in the season.

PAC-12

Remaining Pac-12 members Washington State, Oregon State, Stanford and California may have the uncertainty of their conference's future used against them in living rooms across America.

"I've just always believed that negative recruiting is recruiting, and it's been happening as old as time," Wiltfong said. "Has everybody weaponized that negative recruiting? No, not necessarily. But it is certainly a topic of discussion that could come up? Absolutely."

The remaining Pac-12 schools need to be careful about their next move. Gorney said joining the Mountain West or American Athletic conferences will hurt them because the quality of competition will drop.

Gorney said Stanford and Cal may not be affected as negatively as Washington State and Oregon State because players often attend those schools for reasons beyond football. But Oregon State and Washington State are in remote locations that struggle to recruit anyway. Losing their rivalries against Oregon and Washington if those matchups don't continue also would mean the loss of a key recruiting tool.

SEC

Texas and Oklahoma will combine their great histories with membership in the nation's strongest football conference when they begin SEC play in 2024, making them even bigger threats on the recruiting trail.

Oklahoma has been touting the move when making its case to recruits.

"When you can promote (playing) Alabama, South Carolina and Tennessee, or promote going on the road to Baton Rouge (Louisiana) or to Auburn, Alabama, or to Oxford, Mississippi — it gets the people charged up," Oklahoma coach Brent Venables said. "I love creating vision. I love talking about the future, and they like it when you can create vision for them and they can see it."

FORMER NORTHWESTERN ATHLETES SEND LETTER DEFENDING SCHOOL'S ATHLETIC CULTURE

EVANSTON, Ill. — Approximately 1,000 former Northwestern University athletes sent a letter condemning hazing while defending the school's culture, saying allegations of abuse within the football program and other men's and women's teams do not reflect their experiences.

"We strongly condemn hazing in any form and firmly believe it has no place in collegiate sports or, for that matter, in university life, period," the letter obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday reads. "The allegations being made are troubling and we support the University's efforts to fully investigate these claims. However, these allegations do not represent or define the overall athletics culture at Northwestern."

Northwestern is facing more than a dozen lawsuits across multiple sports with allegations including sexual abuse of players by teammates as well as racist comments by coaches and race-based assaults.

Football coach Pat Fitzgerald was fired last month after 17 seasons. Baseball coach Jim Foster was also let go after one year amid allegations that he created a toxic environment.

The letter was signed by 1,004 people, including 277 football players and four football managers, two student trainers and three mascots.

Yormark: Big 12 talked with UConn, Gonzaga but is not expanding

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Big 12 Commissioner Brett Yormark says his conference is done expanding, shutting down the possibility of adding UConn and Gonzaga after engaging with both basketball powers on potential membership.

Less than two weeks after the Big 12 announced Pac-12 schools Arizona, Arizona State Colorado and Utah will switch leagues and join the conference next year, Yormark appeared on the "Marchand and Ourand Sports Media Podcast" and revealed other potential moves.

"I did have conversations with UConn and Gonzaga, and unfortunately, things didn't work out, only because the dream scenario unfolded for us, so those conversations are no longer," Yormark said.

"I'm a big admirer of both of those programs. They're fantastic for all the right reasons, but I'm focused on the transition of those four (additions) right now."

UConn plays in the Big East and just won its fifth men's NCAA basketball championship in April. The school is also a powerhouse in women's basketball. The Huskies compete as an independent in the top tier of Division I football.

Gonzaga, which plays in the West Coast Conference, has been one of the dominant men's basketball programs for about two decades.

Big 12 men's basketball has surged in recent years and emerged as the most competitive conference in the country. Yormark has said he believes men's college basketball could be a source of untapped value for the conference in future media rights deals.

The Big 12 is saying goodbye to Texas and Oklahoma after this season. Those flagships schools are moving to the Southeastern Conference. But with the addition of Pac-12's so-called Four Corners schools, the Big 12 will have 16 members, spanning from Orlando, Florida, to Salt Lake City, Utah.

"We feel now — being in 10 states, having over 90 million people in our footprint, being in four time zones — gives the Big 12 a chance to do some amazing things when we get back into that next TV negotiation," Yormark said on the podcast. "So the No. 1 guiding principle for us was value creation, and it will always be that as we think about expansion or, for that matter, anything else we do."

The Big 12 agreed to an extension of its media rights deals with Fox and ESPN last fall, though the deal has not been officially announced.

The Big 12 jumped ahead of the Pac-12 to grab a deal that will pay its schools about $31 million per year.

That move undercut the Pac-12 and its commissioner, George Kliavkoff, and left the conference unable to land a competitive deal. That subsequently led to six of its schools bailing for other leagues, including Oregon and Washington to the Big Ten next year.

With only four schools remaining, Stanford, California, Oregon State and Washington State, the future of the Pac-12 is in doubt.

Yormark said he reached out to Kliavkoff and the two spoke last week. He said he told Kliavkoff he was sorry to put him in a tough spot and they had a "collegial conversation."

"I still have a little bit of a knot in my stomach," Yormark said. "I never want my gain to be anyone else's loss."

SEASON

Led by running back Zayn Satchwell — the Madison Courier and KHSAA District 5 Football Player of the Year — the Panthers came two points shy of beating Walton-Verona in the de facto district championship game before whipping Covington Holy Cross 35-6 in the opening round of the playoffs. Eventual state champion Beechwood stopped Carroll's run, 62-14, in the second round. Carroll will get a regular-season shot at Beechwood on Oct. 13 at home.

Satchwell is one of 17 seniors for coach Lonnie Oldham. The Panthers open the season on Friday against Louisville Western and alternate home and away games for the first six weeks of the season.

Carroll's home games are: Western, Aug. 18; Bethlehem, Sept. 1; Anderson County, Sept. 15; Beechwood, Oct. 13; and Gallatin County, Oct. 20.

Carroll's away games are: Kentucky Country Day, Aug. 25; Madison, Sept. 8; Owen County, Sept. 22; Bracken County, Sept. 29; and Walton-Verona, Oct. 6.

Carroll's bye week is Oct. 27.

SWITZERLAND CO. PACERS

Three-straight losses to close the 2022 season ruined Switzerland's chances at a winning season last year as the Pacers finished 4-6.

Coach Ryan Jesop — the only head coach the program has ever had — enters his ninth season at the helm of the Pacers. While Switzerland has not had a winning season in his tenure, the Pacers have finished .500 twice and have won fewer than three games only twice.

Switzerland is scheduled to face the same nine teams in the regular season that it played last year, only the order has shifted around. The Pacers' annual final-week game against Milan has been moved to week four. As a result, much of the schedule has moved back a week.

Switzerland has five home games this season: Crawford County, Aug. 18; Trimble County, Sept. 1; Owen County, Sept. 15; Southside HomeSchool, Oct. 6; and North Decatur, Oct. 13.

The Pacers have four away games: Gallatin County, Aug. 25; Milan, Sept. 8; Edinburgh, Sept. 22; and South Decatur, Sept. 29.

TRIMBLE CO. RAIDERS

Trimble County has taken a step down to Class 1A in coach Mike Genton's second season back with the program. As a result, the Raiders have a new district schedule while maintainingmany of their traditional opponents.

Trimble opens the season on Friday at Jackson County, one of six road/neutral games the Raiders will play this season. Trimble will face Gallatin County at Owen County on Sept. 9.

Trimble's home games are: Bellevue, Aug. 25; Iroquois, Sept. 22; Ludlow, Oct. 6; and Bishop Brossart, Oct. 20.

Trimble's away games are: Jackson County, Aug. 18; Gallatin County, Sept. 9 (at Owen County); Eminence, Sept. 15; Covington Holy Cross, Oct. 13; and Dayton, Oct. 27.

Trimble's bye week is Sept. 29.

bump at the same time. That's just how golf progression goes," Shockley said. "(Assistant) Coach (Shannon) Barger said he thought Emmi only hit one fairway and one green in regulation, and she still broke 50. So there's that silver lining. These nights happen. I'm not worried about either one of them."

Dowell finished with a 48 to lead Madison while Lauren Conner shot a 52, Eliza Burnett had a 54, Wilson a 57 and Caity Dailey a 59.

"Lauren and Eliza have been a tremendous surprise with how quickly they have gotten better. They both really have no business going as low as they have been. It has been fantastic," Shockley said. "Eliza averaged two putts per hole which is what we preach all of the time.

"I'm excited about the direction of this group. They are hard workers, and they all want to succeed and maximize their season. This is one type of year you look for as a coach."

Madison, now 4-0 in non-tournament action, returns to the course on Saturday when it competes in the Floyd Central Invitational. The Cubs then head to Charlestown on Tuesday.
